Harold MacMillan s Succeed Eden s Prime Minister

LONDON — (INS) — Harold MacMillan, set as Conservative leader and close friend of President Eisenhower since World War II days, was appointed Prime Minister Thursday to succeed the resigned, ailing Sir Anthony Eden.

Queen Elizabeth II commanded the 62-year-old chancellor of the Exchequer who is known as "the magician" for his entertaining skill in presenting a government case.

MacMillan's first action after assuming the arduous job was to say there would be no general elections. Then he received and Austen Butler, Lord Privy Seal and House of Commons leader, and Lord Salisbury, Conservative party leader in the House of Lords.

Butler had been Macmillan's rival for the top job and this led to speculation the job would have was mending damaged party ranks, using Lord Salisbury as intermediary.

Queen Elizabeth consulted 82-year-old former prime minister Winston Churchill and Macmillan' Marquess of Salisbury before packing him over the side.

Among the reports circulating political quarters is one claiming that approximately 30 influential Conservative members of parliament bluntly told party leaders last night that they did favor Butler. .

Social Unit 'Demurs' On Violation Charges

by Gene Barlow
Daily Universe Writer

"DO YOU plead guilty or not guilty to the charges?"

"Your Honor, the Athenian Social Unit admits to the action but wishes to demur the charges as specified by the court."

This unexpected "demur" by the Athenians climaxed the Inter-Organization Council Court's preliminary hearing Wednesday evening.

The social unit "objected" to charges against them on the basis that no law states what comprises "improper pledgeship procedures".

The Athenians on the night of Nov. 17, allegedly used "grease and feathers" and other "taboo goating" methods on their fall quarter pledges.

MONROE McKay, student-body president, entered the charge of displaying an "A on "Y" mountain with the "goating" charges in hopes that some ruling would be set concerning the boundaries of "Y" mountain.

IOC Court Justice may not set up rulings on "proper initiation procedures" and on "boundaries of 'Y' mountain".

The results of this trial should benefit all social units in their future activities concerning "goating" methods and the display of the unit's emblems

IOC Court Justices will announces the new "rulings" before the first IOC Court trial, Monday.

NANCY Briggs, IOC Court prosecuting attorney, will prosecute the Athenian trial regardless of the recent petition regarding her authority, it was learned.

According to Miss Briggs, the IOC rule of holding other executive positions was waved by a majority vote of the IOC

A re-trial may be obtained by the Athenians regarding the question of her authority.

Defending the Athenians are Kirk Hart and Jerry Kindred.

KINDRED SAID after the hearing "On the basis of the charges, we contest the ability of the court to try on these particular points."

"The justices must make certain 'rulings' before the trial, but we recognize the court's authority and are not questioning the legality of the court to determine these 'rulings'."

Hart also commented, "We plead 'demur' so the 'rulings' will aid in the future rush procedures for all units."

Trustees Authorize Tuition Increase Of $10 Beginning Fall Quarter, 1957

THE BOAD of Trustees of Brigham Young University has authorized an increase in tuition of $10 a quarter, beginning with the autumn quarter of 1957, it was announced Thursday night by Dr William F Edwards, vice president in charge of finance and business administration

The increase will raise total student fees to $240 a year. At present tuition is $45 a quarter and student fees for building, gymnasium, student activities and health are $25 The change will bring tuition to $55 a quarter or $165 a year, but student activity fees of $75 a year will remain the same.

DR. EDWARDS pointed out that fees at BYU are still only a third to a quarter of those charged at other private institutions of similar size

BYU charges no out-of-state fee since it is operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and draws students from every state in the Union and many foreign countries

Substantial increases in University expenses made the tuition raise necessary, Dr. Edwards said. For the 1956 calendar year, total operating expenses amounted to about $340 per student, and the estimate for 1957 is about $615 per student or an increase of $75.

HE EXPLAINED that 70 per cent of the $615 per student will come from Church funds and $180 from tuition and non-church sources.

In addition the Church will appropriate funds approximating $400 per student for building, projects and will supply even a larger amount in loans for housing projects on a long-term basis, and at a low rate of interest

The fifty-two months that every student at BYU receives an annual scholarship of $435, which is another $400 per year is spent on new buildings to house his classes" Dr Edwards said.

Senate Debate Results In Bill Allowing Solon Appointments

by Karen Larsen
Daily Universe Writer

AFTER a long and heated debate at Wednesday night's meeting, a bill providing for the appointment of new senators to fill three vacant seats was passed.

The much-discussed controversy on whether to fill Senate vacancies by election or by appointment was cultivated when the Senate Elections Committee received. The committee prepared a bill providing that the sophomore class officers appoint a senator to fill the vacancy of vice president, and that the junior class officers appoint two persons to fill remaining vacancies in the Senate.

STUDENT Affairs Senate Committee chairman Janis Hull and Senators Carl Mitchell and Larry Jenkins prepared the bill that received prolonged debate and a third reading.

Raising a storm of opinions was a bill proposing that the change of studentbody elections be in the spring. Whether to have two general elections or three, and what elections to hold together and when, were the prevailing arguments on the Senate floor.

The bill was referred back to the sub-committee and will be discussed at the next Senate meeting.

JANE Harrison, Inter-Organization Council subcommittee chairman, reported upon the IOC's purpose and structure and suggested that the IOC become more closely affiliated with the Senate.

POOR SIR ANTHONY

THE RESIGNATION Wednesday of British Prime Minister Anthony Eden marks the passing of possibly the last independent action leader of the free world. And even he submitted to pressure in withdrawing from a project that was half-completed, thus withdrawing himself from the independent category.

The Anglo-French "invasion" of Suez Canal areas may have been an ill-timed and unpopular move, but any semblance of honor which might have been accrued—and any damage which might have been done Dictator Emil Nasser's regime—was nullified by the sudden yielding to pressure by Eden and Mollet in their withdrawal.

CESSATION of operations by Anglo-French forces when successes and full occupation of the canal zone was almost assured not only branded the English and the French—as well as the entire free world—as disorganized, uncertain, namby-pambies, but it applied ointment to the throne and firmly welded Nasser to his position when it appeared ripe for topping.

Sir Anthony and his French friend had a commendable idea, and they would have been successful had they not yielded to pressure of the Eisenhower faction and high-flown threats by the Soviets.

HE HAD the opportunity to prove that Britain was still a major power in the world.

As the situation stands now, Nasser has unprecedented power, Britain has taken a back seat to him—with the satanic-appearing dictator dictating terms to the invader and telling the world who can and who cannot use a canal that was built by the British and French, operated by the British and French and defended through two wars by the British.

HAD EDEN persevered in his intention to retake the Suez Canal for the western powers, he may still have been unpopular, but he wouldn't have resigned under the sad conditions he did.

There would have been an aura of admiration about the Ex-Prime Minister for his drive and determination to regain what once belonged to his empire despite subtle and not-so-subtle pressures by Eisenhower who alternates between relying on United Nations authority and invoking U. S. authority; whichever seems most desirable at the time.

A Crisis In The Kremlin . . .

U.S. Must Keep Peac e Until Soviet Collapse

by Howard Handleman
Chief European Correspondent

PARIS — (INS) — The era of disintegrating imperialistic Soviet power brings with it staggering problems for the United States.

Chief of these will be to prevent a third world war from emerging out of an emotion-packed Hate War, or from the even more emotional uprisings accompanied among satellite peoples.

The threat of a major war being triggered in that way was the view of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and West German Foreign Minister Heinrich Von Brentano warned about the dangers of an East German uprising.

IT WAS ALSO the reason Dulles had to make the painful announcement during the December meeting of NATO foreign ministers that the U. S. would not be able to intervene to help any satellite revolt with arms.

The major U. S. problems in the coming years are how to:

1. Encourage and hasten the dissolution of Russian colonial rule over wide areas of the earth without crossing the line into a third world war.

2 Impress upon the Soviet government every step of way that it can relinquish its colonial power without being destroyed from the outside.

3 Build a land of friendship to the Soviet Government without sending allies like France and Britain into a panic of fear that Washington and Moscow are getting to divide the world.

4 Welcome satellite struggles for freedom without actually intervening with arms to help them.

5. Maintain the sympathy and understanding of allies and the American people over the capricious diplomatic road that has to be followed.

THESE problems are all implicit in the broadest objectives of the U. S. government, objectives that predate the Eisenhower administration.

These objectives are to remove the threat of Soviet global aggression without precipitating a third world war.

The American dream of a Russia strong, healthy and friendly goes way back.

With it was the dream of the two greatest powers on earth working together for peace.

George Kennan, former ambassador to the Soviet Union, wrote about that dream as early as 1951, at a time when American armies were locked in battle with Communist armies in Korea and emotions were running high.

Kennan said the two or three best American experts on the Soviet Union in Europe and in 1951 that the satellites would win their independence.

FURTHER he said that the equal confidence that pressures of nationalism, economic needs and intellectuals would force the Soviet regime, eventually, to liberalize.

His admonition to the satellites to Western Europe and to the United States was to accept the new line in their dealings from Russia when it came.

Even before that, in 1946, John Foster Dulles wrote that if the Free World held together in unity there would come a time when the Soviets might feel it expedient to try to get along with the West.

As Secretary of State, Dulles kept that objective in mind, and maintained his confidence that the free world could wait and achieve a healthy working relationship with Russia.

REPEATEDLY he has said, even in times of greatest trouble, "I would rather have my problems than Molotov's."

At the same time, while retaining faith in the eventual change inside Russia, Dulles always inserted the point that he did not believe the Soviet rulers would voluntarily give up their control over the empire.

His hope was that involuntarily, through the pressures from within and without, they would accept the basic idea that "you can't whip 'em, join 'em."

They don't expect it quickly.

It takes a long time to abandon a dream of world empire.

But in time, three, four or five years, the Western experts are convinced the Russians will come around to the point of offering a realistic and acceptable formula by which the two worlds of the cold war era can live together in peace and later even friendship.

NOTHING is quite so over as Christmas holidays when the calendar reads January 10th.

In fact, it is doubtful if many people can remember the resolutions they made with great fervor only a little over a week ago.

However, here is a reminder of a resolution you made, if probably when you made an New Year's Day, but was resolved near the close of fall quarter, after an all-night session with a typewriter or during the futile process of absorbing several books in one or two days. Yes, we are talking about the resolution not to procrastinate. 'Nuff said?

* * * *

A look at the activity calendar indicates that a variety of events are scheduled for winter quarter. Each week seems to be trying to outdo each one of the other nine.

Eight home basketball games, nine studentbody dances, three dramatic offerings, seven lyceums, Belle of the Y Week and Snow Carnival plus weekly mixers and dances and Mutual Improvement Association are in the offering.

The ingenious scurf and scurry staffs of the Daily Universe are once again combining forces. This time it is to sponsor an intramural basketball team. If this team makes as much commotion in intramural circles as it does in the Universe office the results will probably be extraordinary in sport circles.

Not content to let bad enough alone, these basketball enthusiasts have announced that a place on the team may be found for every Universe staff member.

* * * *

SEEMS TO me that a decision should be reached as to which the library is a place for collective or for individual study.

There seems to be a question in the minds of some students.

Many people go there to find the one refuge of quiet on busy campus and are thus pointed.

"Don't worry—if it looks like we're going to get more snow, I'll put the top up."

Waddy Heartbreak House Awaits Wary Cougar Invasion Saturday

by Mark Murphy

Situated forbiddingly on the highest college campus in America is the heartbreak house of Skyline basketball.

Wyoming University's infamous monument to Waddy athletics, War Memorial Coliseum, has long been the scene of shattered dreams of easaba supremacy held by many an unsuspecting guest.

Saturday night, Brigham Young's road-wise Cougars will be out to do a little house cleaning in the monstrous edifice as they meet the host Waddies in what may be the make or break game of the year for the Brighams.

Year after year Redskin, Cougar and Farmer alike have treked light-heartedly across the mountains, proudly bearing outstanding records against the nation's best hoop foes only to meet their Waterloo at the hands of the bushwacking Pokes.

The stage is again set perfectly for a typical Wyoming welcoming.

Championship Bout Delay Considered

CLEVELAND — INS — The Cleveland Boxing Commission, welterweight champ Carmen Basilio and his co-managers meet today to discuss a possible postponement of the Jan. 19 championship battle with challenger Johnny Saxton.

Basilio and his co-managers, Johnny DeJohn and Joe Netro of Syracuse, arrived in Cleveland last night. Several hours earlier in Syracuse they had mentioned a postponement to Matchmaker Billy Brown of the International Boxing Club.

Basilio reportedly is suffering from a bruised hand, an injury received while training.

Coache's Group Reprimands Own Members

ST. LOUIS, (INS) — The ethics Committee of the American Football Coaches Association has made an unprecedented move by taking disciplinary action against at least 12 coaches.

The group's chairman, Bill Murray, head football coach at the Duke Blue Devils, announced in St. Louis that the action was taken against the coaches, but no names were announced.

The action taken ranged from reprimands to outright probation.

In some cases, Murray reported, it was found that the coach was placed in a bad situation through no fault of his own. Over-zealous alumni were blamed for some of the difficulty.

At the same time, the group named the newly retired famed Indianola Coach Lou Little as head of the rules committee.

Jess Neely of Rice, outgoing president of the association, will be honored today while Tennessee's Bowden Wyatt will receive the "coach of the year" award.

The coaches took stock of their shortcomings and cited certain violations which cannot be corrected. They include the scalping of tickets, any form of sideline coaching and scouting practice sessions of opponents.

Green Cougar Bone Grinders Face Veteran Farmer Squad

by Jerry Cunningham

An inexperienced Brigham Young University wrestling squad, sporting a new coach and a host of grovelling grapplers, will meet a well-seasoned Utah State squad in Logan Saturday.

Allan Davis, coaching BYU wrestling for the first time this year, has worked overtime to get his squad ready for action. Davis has a number of veterans among his charges.

"As a team, we're green and very thin in certain divisions," Davis confessed. "But all of the boys have shown a marked improvement within the last two weeks, so we will grow stronger as the season progresses."

The Aggies, second in the conference last year, are heavy favorites to take the measure of the unisetted Cougars.

George "Doc" Nelson, practically an institution at Utah State by virtue of his 26 years a grappling mentor, reports that he has one of his strongest teams this year.

Nelson, after whom the Aggies' fieldhouse was named, has four returning lettermen bolstering his team. Bill Weaver, 157 pounds was third in the conference, Ted Ramage, heavyweight conference winner, Al Kubota, 130, and Juno Uyematsu, 133, are the other returning lettermen.

BYU has three lettermen on the squad. Dave Harker, 210-pound football tackle, is a strong contender in the heavyweight division.

Ted Willich, 167-pound junior, lettered with the squad last year as did Merrill Cain, a junior who wrestles in the 177-pound division.

Wesley L. Packer, junior, wrestles in the 123-pound division. A sophomore from Lynndyl, Utah, Rodger Overson represents BYU in the 130-pound division.

The Cougars have three strong representatives in the 157-pound division: sophomores Leroi Davies and Wallace Baker, and junior Paul Ashton Paul Eckel, an outstanding sophomore grid prospect, is a 177-pounder as is Calvin Merrill and Glenn. Wayne Ash, a football tackle, is a new heavyweight prospect.

their last seven games and bearing the titular aspirations by legions of Cougar hoop followers, go up against a Wyoming crew who can boast but a shoddy 3-8 season's record and a 1-1 conference mark.

With experts already committing to doom all traveling teams to conference play, the pipe-burning Cats are prepared for plenty of rough treatment on the eastern slopes. Friday night's tilt sle with Colorado A&M may well provide a clue for Saturday's showdown with the Cowboys.

Coach Ev Shelton, ring master of the Cowboys, is just about the cagiest fellow in Skyline coaching circles. Annually the foxy tutor comes up with a bushel of surprises for Western visitors. This year is no exception.

Long starters of precision tooled basketball and exponents of the "slow down and win" theory, the Cowboys are a rarin' outfit this year. With three nice-horse sophomores and hot driving Terry Eckhardt proven at the heart of Wyomingle attack, Shelton is featuring a fast break outfit for the first time in years.

The loss via graduation of little but the services last year's sterling All-Conference and near All-American performer hurt but the fine all-set-ed Eckhardt and the three heralded sophes, Phil Bailey, Tom Windis and Bob Rhynsburger.

Publicity drums are already booming Mulkey into a sentry in the Waddy hall of fame. Mulkey is the highest performer at Wyo and has been called one of W Coach's greatest all-around athletes during his short stay at the prairie land school. Mulkey is a 6-3 gangerous guy with lots set shots and a good driver.

Rhynsburger is not a step behind Mulkey in Shelton' estimation. Rhynsburger is a 6-5, 205 lb. center and according to Poke lub thumbers, is a better than average passer.

Windis, another of the terrible trio of sophomores, is an excellent ball handler and passer. is another set shot artist.

Eckhardt, 6-1 forward, sophomore last year placed se ond to Cigna in Wyoming sco ing and is expected to be th Cowboy leader this year.
